Contents	Ethical Problem Solving in Social Work Practice is a multi-professional course of studies taken together with students from the Degree Program of Nursing which develops students' ability to discuss multifaceted ethical problems taken from their own practical experiences and analysing them from various viewpoints. In the analysis of ethical problems, personal and community interpretations are juxtaposed with societal and global ones and a student's skills of critical analysis are emphasised.
Tutoring and communication	small group and individual tutoring
Other arrangements	obligatory attendance in two external seminar or conferences
