Contents	Identity Formation examines human development within a life span approach. The study unit also focuses on interaction and different kinds of group phenomena. By combining theory and practice, the student develops her/his interaction skills and promotes effective group work. KEY QUESTIONS: What does life span development mean? How do different developmental theories explain human development? How does individual development proceed and what are protective and risk factors? What constitutes a group and how do you promote effective group work? Why do individual values, attitudes and emotions effect interaction? How do you lead a group?
